

Controllers' comments Akroydon.

Another successful EPOC Urban event.

Organiser Neil, justified his nomination as British Orienteering Volunteer of the Year award. His choice of location worked well and he was well supported by the usual experienced team of EPOC helpers.

Simon proved that not only is he a top competitor but also an excellent planner. His courses received very favourable comments. The intricate high-rise flats area near the start and finish proved difficult for some and highlighted the need to closely look at control descriptions.

Can I ask those of you who had control 82 to take a relook at your route into the control? The description was SW side of the road not SW side of a wall. Some people approached from the south side up the road between the two buildings and either punched over the wall or went through a private garden. This was not right and you should have gone back down and around to the control.
